WEEK EXDING THURSDAY. May 28, 1874.

COMMERCIAL EPITOME-There is scarcely a new feature to note in trade circles this week. The Spring season draws to a close with results generally unfavorable and disappointing. The new currency bill continues to excite the attention of business men and those who are most interested in its passage. From our Northern exchanges we see that it has been the sensation of the week in monetary circles and in order that our readers may be made aware of the exact meaning we publish to-day some of its provisions. The bill provides, in brief, that the maximum issue of greenbacks shall be what it now is -$382,-000,000. The restriction to the issue National bank notes is removed, thus providing for an unlimited issue purpose of finishing the business so as of this kind of currency, or free banko enable the delegates present to reing without specie redemption. The banks are not required to hold any reserve against their circulation, but must deposit with the Treasurer of the United States an amount of greenbacks equal to five per cent. of their circulation for a redemption fund, and Ecsolved, That the thanks of this the reserve against deposits must, meeting be and are hereby tendered to within ninety days, be held only in the the President of the Bank of New vaults of each bank.
